Dear Local Planning Review,

I am writing to you about the proposed development at Wisbe Green. These are my own personal thoughts and ideas about it.

We are in an era of global warming - whether you believe it is due to human activity and/or a naturally occurring event. Slimbridge and its environs

are only a little above sea level so any new building

at all in this area would seem to be extremely foolish.

Any new housing should be near to where people work to reduce pollution and the use of petrol in general.

People will not use bikes, trains or buses instead of their cars.

Any housing that is put up will no doubt have smaller rooms, fewer windows and what are laughably called gardens - so a real return to the victorian era. New houses should be triple glazed and have solar panels as standard again to reduce the impact on the environment. People need decent housing not the cheapest or the most houses we can build on a plot, so that a few make a lot of money. We need to do what is right not what is right for the few or convenient.
