

received the credit for reworking it from the state of a marsh, (fn. 55) but the green was described as 'a very pleasant place' 20 years earlier. (fn. 56)

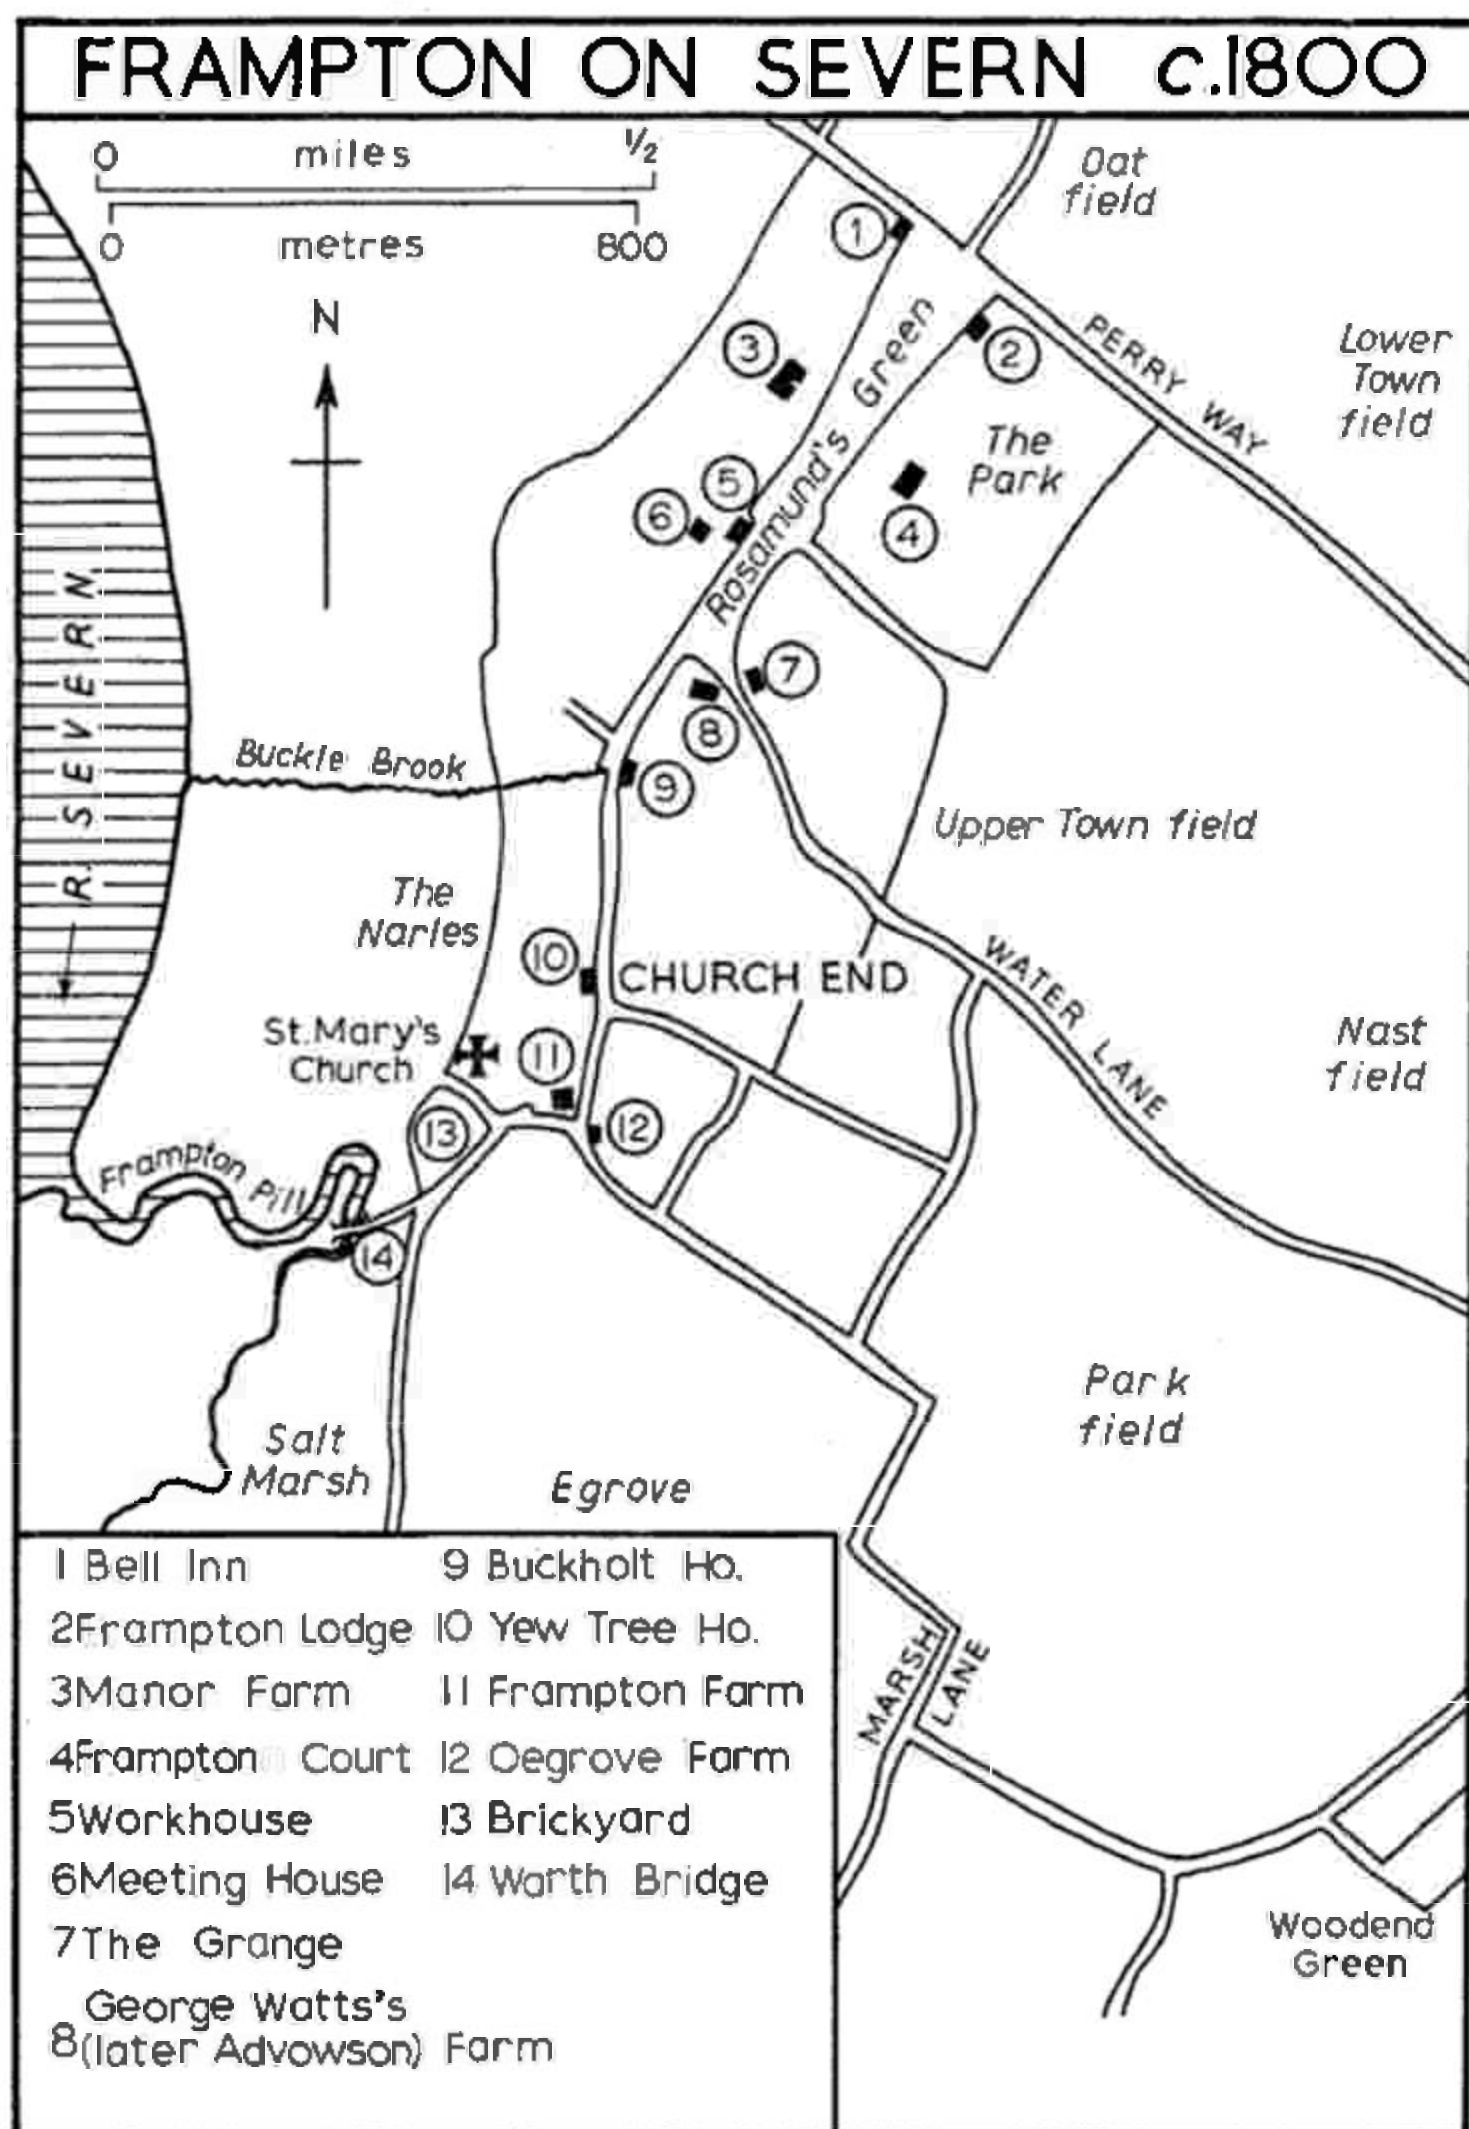

Figure 8:
Frampton-on-Severn c. 1800

The village was a relatively large one and in minor ways acted as a

We use cookies on this site

More information about how you can control your browser cookies is available on our privacy page. Give me more info

OK